MARS HILL ACADEMY SHOWCASED IN ARCHITECTURAL GUIDE

Mason, Ohio – Mars Hill Academy, a private classical and Christian K-12 school, is pleased to announce that its new facility at 4230 Aero Drive is featured in the 2007 Learning By Design architectural guide, an annual publication which showcases selected educational facilities projects from across the country. Out of hundreds of project submissions, only a fraction are selected to appear in the issue. According to the publication, the projects featured “reflect outstanding...facilities that succeed in enriching the learning environment.”

Mars Hill Academy thanks Cole + Russell Architects, 537 East Pete Rose Way, Cincinnati, for their work in designing the current facility and for submitting the project to Learning By Design for consideration. “Cole + Russell understood our desire to build a facility that reflects our Christian philosophy regarding aesthetics,” shares MHA board member Tom Thistleton. “The result is a building that meets our practical needs and has enduring, classical style and grace.” Although MHA has been in operation for eleven years, this is the school’s second year of operation at their new location, 4230 Aero Drive, near Western Row and I-71. Cincinnati Magazine this year ranked MHA’s high school among the top five private high schools in Cincinnati.

Mars Hill Academy, a private K-12 classical and Christian school founded in 1996, is a member of the Association of Classical and Christian Schools, and is one of a growing number of schools across the country which have revived classical education, a building block of western civilization that inspired many cultural movements and achievements of historic significance. The name Mars Hill refers to the knoll on the acropolis in Athens, Greece, where the apostle Paul reasoned with the Athenian philosophers and counsel members about "the God who made the world and all things in it" (Acts 17). Mars Hill desires that its graduates have a deep understanding of their world, the ability to discern truth, beauty, and goodness, and the ability to think, learn, and influence our world, for the glory of God. Mars Hill is supported through tuition, development efforts, and gifts from individuals and organizations.
